Tentative Concept Note

IQAC Sub-Committee on Enhancing Research

Vision

The committee has been envisaged as a nodal agency under the aegis of the Internal Quality Assessment Cell (IQAC), Motilal Nehru College, to create and enhance research capacity and output in the college. For this purpose the committee will act as a mentor to encourage engagement in research activities, provide information support in capacity building, co-ordinate and synergize departmental, inter-departmental and multi-departmental research effort and also monitor research quality and volume to ensure maintenance of excellence and work-flow continuity. To achieve this vision the committee aims to engage pan-college faculty so that the diverse pool of talent may be leveraged. With this view the structure of the committee is tentatively proposed to be as follows:

Structure

- The committee will include a convenor with members both from IQAC and also non-IQAC with a maximum of 6 members. However three members in the committee must be such that they represent broad discipline based demarcations; namely Social Sciences, Humanities and Sciences.
- Further, the research committee will engage with every department and encourage departmental members who are actively engaged in research and are keen to develop departmental research potential to explore and collate information that pertains to individual, departmental and student centred research opportunities. This would include penning various dedicated websites both government and otherwise and other sources of information regarding call-for papers, internships, sponsorships and funding on a regular basis. This information would need to be shared on a weekly basis through a dedicated social-media departmental group; through email or other preferred channel of communication.

Meeting schedule

- To ensure work-flow continuity it is recommended that the research committee meet at least once a month while the meeting with departments be held on a quarterly basis.
- The purpose of the meetings would be review status of proposals/publications, ensure timely and adequate dissemination of research information and ensure balanced development of research potential across departments.
- It is proposed that at the beginning of the academic term a mandatory meeting of the research committee with various departments be held wherein an outline of the academic events/ seminars/conferences/ workshops that each department plans to organise in the coming term be ascertained.
- It is also proposed that an orientation program be held by the research committee at the beginning of the academic term wherein faculty may be provided detailed information about the nature of research seminars/conferences/ workshops that should be organised including the process of application, need for funding and resource persons. Faculty members must also be informed about the need to align all such activities with the IQAC so that coordination and collation of information may be possible. This information may be shared on a bulletin board which would need to be updated regularly and made accessible to faculty members.
- Further webinars can also be held that enhance individual research capacity in terms of training about how to draft research proposals, information about journals that are recognized by UGC, understanding of 'impact factor' and concerns regarding 'plagiarism'.

Incentivising Research

Given that research capacity and output are now central to the teaching life-cycle be it appointments or promotions; it is essential to create robust research capabilities. One way to do this would be to incentivize research based achievements both at the individual and departmental level through intra-college recognition namely academic awards, mention on website or blogs and through the college magazine and newsletter. Further, intense research can be leveraged through seminars and talks that college faculty can deliver.
