Keynote Speaker

1. Keynote speaker on the topic "Green Management and Sustainability in Business Operations" at 4th National Conference on Indian Economy, Green Management, Artificial Intelligence, Gender Inequality and Social Networking: Emerging Trends and Technology Issues organized by INSPIRA Research Association at Jaipur

Can education conquer genetics?

Recently I read a book "Born, Not Made: The Entrepreneurial Personality" where authors argue that some personalities are much more favorable for entrepreneurship. It is an important thing, and it really constrains and influences outcomes. "Entrepreneurs are different." They have the ability to deal with uncertainty, to take risks and tolerate ambiguity. They usually have a personality that is mercurial, and they have highs that are really high and lows that are really low. As a consequence, if you want to know who's most likely to be an entrepreneur, don't go to a business school and see who has taken entrepreneurship courses, instead just observe the behavior of a person to find his entrepreneurial abilities. After reading this book I thought authors have put a question mark upon the face of education. In my opinion they simply concluded that education can instill skills but cannot groom personality traits. I am inclined to think that in the education system whether we are creating any value or wasting our resources. I have firm belief that though we cannot teach a person to take risk but still we can teach him how to calculate the risk and cover risk with available resources and knowledge. Practice makes a man perfect is a proverb which tells us the importance of continuous practice in any subject to learn anything. There is no alternate to the hard work and success. We must practice in the particular field on regular basis in which we want to succeed. Nobody can perform well in his field if he does not practice on regular basis. Only by continuous practice, a man can achieve his target and succeed in his particular field. Knowledge is a big thing but if practice is not done, knowledge cannot take us to our goal. We have to convert our knowledge into action which needs regular practice. I am assured that teachers of this college have delivered their best in imparting knowledge and training. I request all the students of this college to use their knowledge to the full extent and apply it in practical field. Together we need to prove that we can revolve the axis regardless of our genetics and education has power to change personality traits.
